Sean Bell, 23
Murdered by NYPD
November 25, 2006

Year after year—a grim death toll. Men, women, children, elderly—all found among the victims. The targets, mostly Black or Latino. The killers strike with impunity, ferocity and with the full backing of authority, defending a system that has no future for the youth, other than prison, crime, an early grave, or on-again off-again dead-end jobs.

During the early hours of November 25, 2006, on a darkened New York City street—they struck again. A group of undercover officers fired 50 rounds into a car, killing 23-year-old Sean Bell, and wounding his two friends. They were all unarmed. Sean was hours away from his wedding.

Less than three weeks later, the killers struck again. On December 13, 19-year-old Timur Person was killed by police in the South Bronx. On December 16, 62-year-old Anatoly Dimitriev was gunned down by police.
